You're driving home like any other day but above the road, on a pole, bridge, patrol car, or toll point, a machine may already be watching you. In continuing to modernize efforts in front-line operations, Peel Regional Police recently outfitted patrol vehicles with Automated License Plate Recognition (ALPR). Abstract: Automatic license plate recognition (ALPR) is a technology that uses cameras and software to identify and track vehicles. It is used by law enforcement agencies to monitor traffic, identify vehicles involved in accidents, and track stolen vehicles. ALPR systems can also be used to identify vehicles that are parked in restricted areas or that are driving in restricted zones. The technology is becoming increasingly common as law enforcement agencies seek to improve their ability to monitor and track vehicles.
